

LAKE OF RAINFALL CAUSES ANXIETY TO GROWERS OF CANE

Situation On Hawaii Becomes Serious and Fears Are Expressed For Crop of 1919

PRESENT CROP IS NOT IN ANY WAY ENDANGERED

Valley Island Conditions Not So Serious But Copious Rains Are Sorely Needed

HILLO, July 19.—Misfortune now threatens the island of Hawaii unless the drought which has prevailed throughout the greater part of the past four months is broken within an exceedingly short time. Not for years, it is stated by old residents of Hilo, Kau and the Hamakua coast, has there been such a persistent spell of dry weather.

Here in Hilo and the surrounding country there have been a number of showers during the past few months, but they have hardly done more than wet the ground, with the result that people are watering their gardens and trying to save plants and flowers which were before needed, such attention during this time of drought.

Along the Hamakua coast most of the mills have closed down, or are only working on part time. In some places especially near Hilo, it is reported that water is being hauled for domestic purposes, something which is very unusual in Hamakua.

The result is that the cane fields, very few of which are irrigated, are feeling the effects of the drought, and while it is asserted that so far no serious damage has been done, it is sure to greatly affect the crop of 1919, should the dry spell continue.

Kau In Bad Shape
In Kau it is stated that there is actual suffering and every spring is being called upon to furnish its drop in the lowland from the land in this district is reported by Chairman Kanihika to be parched, and all hope of bringing most gardens to the finish of a good crop has been given up in despair.

Another report is to the effect that the coffee crop in both the Hamakua district and in the famed Kona district, will be short this year, although of good quality.

Danger From Fires
In the Puna district the forest lands are so dry that fear is felt in case of fire starting that much damage would be done. Road Supervisor Henry J. Lyman, of this district, has issued a notice requesting everybody, especially smokers, to be very careful about dropping lighted matches or cigarettes in the brush, or along the roads.

Reports received from Kohala last evening, were to the effect that much suffering is being felt there for lack of rain and it is feared that much damage will follow a continuance of the drought.

A good hard rain at this time would be worth barrels of gold to the island of Hawaii.

Dry weather on Hawaii and on Maui as well as elsewhere, is a source of anxiety to the agencies here of the plantations on those islands for more than a month past. While the present crop has no far advanced in growth and harvesting that it is beyond injury and the 1918 crop has thus far not suffered to any great extent there is admittedly ground for anxiety to the 1919 crop.

Maui is not so seriously affected as Hawaii by lack of rain but the Valley Island is suffering from a similar protracted dry spell to that of which Hawaii complains. A representative of one of the agencies last week said that the situation was beginning to take serious aspect, that water was getting scarce and that unless the drought be soon broken by rains or by showers of more importance than those which have fallen, the next two crops will feel serious effects from the failure of needed moisture.

This year's sugar crop is fully up to early expectations and it will in many instances exceed estimates. Satisfactory weather while the crops were in the growing stages, few wet backs and a larger sugar content than the average go to bring a bigger output than had been anticipated. But the weather on Hawaii and Maui will have its effect on the growth of next year's cane and its sugar content and still more so upon the 1919 crop which is now being retarded when it should be making headway.

NO PRO-GERMANS IN HAWAII IN PILIKIA

S. C. Huber, United States attorney for this district, returned with Judge Vaughan and other officials of the federal court from Hilo yesterday after completing the work of the court in that city. Mr. Huber took the first opportunity to put a quietus on three rumors that have been going the round. "No Germans have been arrested by the federal officials while in Hilo," said the attorney, "and his office here has not received any information regarding the so-called Hindoo plots, in which reports from the mainland insisted that a former German consul in this city is implicated and indicted, and he also denied that he had any information to the effect that a Honolulu had been summoned to San Francisco to answer conspiracy charges in connection with this plot."

MRS. GREIG DIES ON FANNING ISLAND

Death of Aged Woman Breaks Link Between Old and New South Seas

News has been received here that Mrs. William Greig of Fanning Island died on Washington Island June 19 and was buried on Fanning July 8. Fred L. Waldron, Ltd., agents for the Fanning estate, received the news of Mrs. Greig's death in a letter from the San Francisco agents, Wightman & Crane.

It is as the mother of W. H. G. (Willie) Greig that Mrs. Greig will be known best to Honoluluans, for Mr. Greig resided here for a long time twenty-five years ago and has made numerous visits to Honolulu since. Another son, James Greig, also resided here for a shorter time.

In the death of Mrs. Greig one of the links between the old and new South Seas is broken. She was the widow of William Greig, a Scot, who owned Fanning and Washington Islands for years. Mr. Greig, coming to Honolulu from California, whither he went in the gold rush, became a partner of Captain English in Fanning and Washington and later took over the islands. He died in 1902 and his grave is beside the Fanning lagoon, where it is presumed, Mrs. Greig also has been buried.

Mrs. Greig was the passing of Fanning laborer from her husband's plantations and the introduction of Manihiki natives and the employment of them by Gilbertson. The old process for making coconut oil have disappeared, and, instead, copra is bulk is exported to the great mills of the States and Australia. The little trading schooner seldom are met nowadays, steamers having taken their place.

Long after she went to Fanning Island the last of the blackbirding ships out there with its cargo of kidnapped natives. Throughout the change from the South Sea of the last century to the South Sea of today, she resided on the little atoll of Fanning, meeting upon the same coconut groves, coral sand and rainbow lagoons.

She was a native of Manihiki, a Polynesian island. Besides William and Frances, she is survived by George, a son, son of Sydney; David, a son of Fanning and Washington; and Mrs. Anderson, a daughter, of Fanning, besides grandchildren, some of whom are in Honolulu.

Her age must have been seventy-five years or more. Honoluluans who have seen her on Fanning Island remember Mrs. Greig as a woman of strong and striking personality.

WARSHIP REQUEST IS PLACED UPON FILES

Secretary Daniels Writes Acknowledging Letter

Further steps looking to the naming of a new warship for the Territory of Hawaii have been taken by the promotion committee in a letter which was sent to Secretary of Navy Josephus Daniels by A. P. Taylor, secretary of the committee.

Acknowledging the letter and the request Secretary Daniels writes as follows:

"Washington, D. C., July 6, 1917.
My Dear Mr. Taylor:
I have received your letter of June 21st, and I thank you for your kindness in sending me a copy of the Mid-Pacific Magazine for May, and have noted with interest your article entitled 'Pearl Harbor, the Malta of the Pacific.'"

"I also note your suggestion on behalf of the Hawaii Promotion Committee that one of the new war vessels be named 'Hawaii.' I have taken pleasure in filing your letter for consideration when the question of the naming of war vessels is again taken up."

Sincerely yours,
"JOSEPHUS DANIELS."

ISHII CONDEMNED FOR ACCEPTING MISSION

(Special Cable to Nippon Jiji)

TOKIO, July 20.—Viscount K. Ishii, head of the Japanese war commission to the United States, was tendered a farewell banquet by Viscount I. Motono, minister of foreign affairs, last evening at the Motono official residence. Many prominent diplomats were present.

Ishii is being denounced by the members of the Kenseikai, the opposition party, because he accepted the position as head of the commission under the Terachi ministry. Ishii was foreign minister under the Okuma ministry and as a consequence he is being made the target of criticism for accepting a position given him by Terachi.

During the time that Okuma was premier the Kenseikai were in power, but according to Viscount Ishii he was never a member of this party, and said at the banquet that he reserved the right to accept a commission under any regime.

One of the biggest problems confronting the two nations is bringing United States and Japan in close relations, and political ambitions or rivalry between parties should not appear in such a case as this one," said the head of the commission in his farewell address.

WAR HAS EFFECT ON MARKET FOR COFFEE

Central Powers Great Consumers and Their Exclusion Adds To Available Supply

(Mail Correspondence)
HILLO, July 20.—According to Abe Louison, the Hamakua coffee grower, the European war is responsible for the present fall in the coffee market. He explained the situation in the following manner:

"It is not, perhaps a generally known fact, but it is true, nevertheless, that the Central Powers today, are the greatest coffee consumers of Europe. They got into the market for nearly six million bags of coffee a year, and when we consider that a bag of coffee contains 132 pounds instead of the supposed 100, then we have that market increased to nearly eight million of what we understand, bags of coffee."

Coffee and Sugar Differ
"This European market being closed to the coffee grower, even though the American market is by far the largest in the world, there is naturally a surplus supply and this just as naturally tends to lower the price. It is different with sugar. The Central Powers, some of them at least, are sugar producers and the fact that they were cut off from sugar exportation, greatly benefited this product in as much as it left the balance of the world market open for the sugar producing countries outside of their borders."

Honey Industry Also Affected
"Then again, getting away from the coffee situation, we come to the honey industry of the Territory. I am reliably informed that there are those who have heretofore been able to demand good prices for their product, but owing to the fact that nearly all their sales were made to Germany, and that the war has absolutely destroyed this market, they are forced to take as low as one cent a pound for honey which up to the outbreak of hostilities, sold for six cents."

Outlook More Promising
"The coffee outlook for my district is very promising, the crop being a little short, perhaps of that of the past year, still the quality is up to the standard, and I have no complaint to make other than we have not the market nor the price for the quality of the goods we are producing. My trees are in excellent condition and the reason that the crop is not so large as they have never yet experienced and that conditions on the world coffee market would likely show a strong demand with a shortage in supply."

United States Prepares In France For Organizing Aviators
(Associated Press By U. S. Naval Communication Service)
PARIS, July 21.—The United States is making preparations for a start in its plans for a serious force that will safely blanket Germany in the air on the western front at least. It is figuring on a ratio of five machines for each one of the Germans may have. French and British aviation officers will do the instructing of the army of aviators that will be required to man this great air fleet.

Boilers Will Be Installed After Present Crop and Twelve Roller Plant a Year Later
Among the recent announcements of increases and improvements contemplated by plantations of the Territory one of the important ones is that Olowalu Sugar Company will install a twelve-roller mill to cost $50,000. The mill will be put in after the present crop is disposed of and the mill is expected to be completed after the next crop has been harvested, a little more than a year from now.

Contract for the new Olowalu mill has been placed with Catton, Neill and Company and twelve rollers, twenty-seven by forty-eight, will supplant the present eight roller mill. The new boiler capacity will show an increase of fifty per cent.

Increase of storage capacity is the chief improvement that is to be noted among the Big Island plantations. Kalahe, Pepekeo and Hilo Sugar Company are all making increases of from fifty to 200 per cent.

LOCAL GRAPE JUICE FOR THIRSTY HAWAII

Suggestion Made To Food Commission For Utilization of Product of Island Vineyards

Taking for his text the query as to why Hawaii's grape crop should be permitted to rot because the making of wine has ceased, Will P. Thomas, of the Thomas Pineapple Company has laid before the territorial food commission a suggestion for the utilization of valuable produce now threatening to go to waste.

If the people of Hawaii are willing to drink imported grape juice, why should they not support a grape juice industry? Mr. Thomas believes, and so states in his letter to the food commission, that all the details necessary to turn Maui and Hawaii's grapes into a commercial non-alcoholic and acceptable product could be handled locally.

The shutting down of the Hamakua and other wine manufacturing in anticipation of the advent of prohibition has left tons of grapes to rot on the vines, the produce representing in many instances the main assets of many small farmers, especially on Maui. Mr. Thomas feels confident that prohibition can still further be anticipated by the manufacture for local consumption of grape beverage that will have to supplant wine.

Hundred Tons On Maui
There are, Mr. Thomas thinks, a hundred tons of grapes this year on Maui for which there is now no use, while a large quantity is produced on Hawaii. J. G. Serrao, of Hilo, has for example twenty acres in grapes now on heavily bearing in the vineyards are breaking beneath the weight. On the fourth of July he anticipated any future grape juice industry by making from his own grapes and selling to the thirsty patriots fifty dollars worth of the produce.

Mr. Thomas says there is no trick about the manufacture of grape juice; it is a case purely of sterilizing the juice in the bottles, and he believes that the bottles and other adjuncts can be secured here.

The food commission will investigate all the possibilities of the suggestion. Most of the grapes grown in the Territory are Isabella, and fit for the purpose intended.

WEEKLY MARKET LETTER
The price of eggs and poultry remain the same. There are very few changes in the green vegetable market.

Island fruit-potatoes are falling off in price due to the importation of California new potatoes. In order to clean up the potatoes on hand, the Division is going to sell them by the bag for $2.75.

The grapes that have been coming down from Hawaii have been selling well at 6 cents a pound. A great many people have taken advantage of the low price to make grape juice, jelly and jam. Another large shipment is expected tomorrow morning and a shipment is coming down from Maui on Sunday.

Potatoes are being used in large quantities by housewives for making jacks and jellies. A large shipment is expected from Hawaii tomorrow.

Bananas are very plentiful and in an effort to clean up some old consignments, the Division is going to sell them at a very low figure tomorrow. Buy a bunch of bananas, a basket of grapes and a sack of potatoes.

A. T. LONGLEY, Superintendent.

SAVE SURPLUS OF YOUR HOME GARDEN FOOD NOT EATEN FRESH SHOULD BE MADE BY GARDENERS

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The crop of vegetables from home gardens promised to be unusually large in practically all sections of the country this year, says the United States Department of Agriculture in a statement just issued. Some gardeners, therefore, it is pointed out, should begin now to plan up what the products raised by them will be used to the best possible advantage, without waste.

"There is likely to be an unusually large production of vegetables from small home gardens in most communities this year," says the statement. "Home gardeners, therefore, should lay their plans carefully so that they will be in a position to use their garden produce, both by immediate consumption and by preservation by canning, drying, or in other ways, so that a good food bill will be wanted."

"A very material saving can be effected in the food bill in many instances by having the meals consist largely of the fresh home-grown vegetables and less extensively of the perishable foods brought from grocery stores. By following this plan, also, gardeners will relieve the demand for the non-perishable foods."

Even with liberal use in the family diet is a fresh state, however, there will be considerable surpluses of vegetables from many home gardens. These should be saved in some way. Canning is the method most usually employed, but it is possible that cans and jars cannot be obtained in sufficient quantities this year to pack the surplus produce. In such cases many products easily can be preserved by drying.

By this method surplus water is driven by placing sliced products on trays in the sun, over a stove or before an electric fan. The dried foods can be kept perfectly in paper bags or boxes sufficiently tight to exclude insects. Soaking in water will bring the products back practically to their original texture and they may then be cooked like fresh vegetables.

In putting up vegetables and fruits for future use the home gardener may find the following suggestions useful:

"If you can obtain cans and jars only in limited numbers, can tomatoes and other vegetables which cannot be dried easily, and such fruits as you prefer in a juicy form. Wherever possible concentrate succulent foods, such as tomatoes."

"Preserve or jam the fruits and berries which you prefer in that form, and put them in glasses sealed with paraffin or in wide necked bottles."

"Put fruit juices in ordinary bottles."

"Dry practically any common vegetable except asparagus, egg plant, radishes, lettuce and the like, and most fruits except strawberries and native grapes. The more important of the vegetables that are usually dried are sweet-corn, snap and string beans, shell beans, shelled peas, and the root crops. Tomatoes though consisting in large part of water are dried successfully by many immigrants from Southern Europe."

"If a considerable number of canning jars are at your disposal so that vegetables may be canned be sure to include the more nutritious such as green beans and peas."
